ABSTRACT

Techniques that define a type of endian conversion to be performed on a portion of data stored within a memory system are described.  A table entry is written to a memory

5    management table that specifies the location of the portion of data within the memory system and the type of endian conversion to be performed on the portion of data.

20702106.doc